Notes on vendor and products:

1. Produce must be of quality fit for human consumption.

2. We generally pick up produce once weekly, sometimes twice, in order to keep a minimum supply of perishable produce on hand.

3. A good, on-going working relationship with a produce supplier yields:

   a. An adequate supply of quality produce when availability may be a problem.

   b. Suggestions for lower prices when availability reaches surplus levels.

   c. Offers of non-saleable, but good quality produce, gratis.

   d. General willingness to find us best produce for lowest price.
